What is a "Core" Flame Resistant Style?

The core flame resistant styles you'll see here are no slouches.

They should be considered as excellent starter pieces to any uniform program where flame resistant garments are required.

These items are all NFPA 2112 certified and are qualified to be worn in almost any environment where the following hazards may exist:

- Open flame / flash fire
- Arc flash
- Molten metal

They're considered core not because they're of cheap quality or the lowest price. They're core because they provide the basic amount of protection to keep your employees safe at work.

Let's start your flame resistant uniform the right way.

Core Flame Resistant Shirts

Bulwark SLW2 - 7 oz FR Work Shirt

What is an "Advanced" Flame Resistant Style?

The advanced flame resistant styles you'll see next are a step ahead of the rest.

They should be thought of as premium pieces for any uniform program where flame resistant garments are needed.

These items are also all NFPA 2112 certified. The main differences with these styles are that they're made from some of the most advanced fabrics on the market. These styles have been designed to enhance the wear and feel of garments that have historically been designed for safety only.

The following styles have been made with both the safety and comfort of the wearer in mind. You won't find more comfortable flame resistant fabrics on the market. Period.

But don't think that because they're advanced that they'll annihilate your budget. After the right amount of research, you'll find that these styles provide top notch quality at a reasonable price.

Let's take a look at the best of the best.
